Hi all, this is a very special issue of our regular newsletter, as something exciting has just happened and we'd like to share it with you. We thought you would like to know about it sooner rather than later hence the unconventional appearance of this newsletter.

During Optimec's instrument R&D program, every now and then something new comes along. Amongst those "new" things, can sometimes be found something that is a real "game changer". These extra special moments are quite rare and often they signal a major breakthrough - a point where maybe a new product in development changes from being what everyone thought it would be, into perhaps what we had only dreamt might be possible.

I think this is one of those moments. Take a look at the attached video and I'm pretty
